FOR RELEASE FRIDAY, AUGUST 23

Enrollment in the 10-week summer session winding up Friday at Montana State University is up 200 students, or 12 per cent, from last year's record mark to top all previous summer attendance figures, Registrar Leo Smith reports.

The 1,873 summer scholars signed up for regular classes and special programs were joined by hundreds of townspeople in extracurricular cultural events sparked by a staff augmented by 50 visiting artists and scholars.

Outstanding music and theater were made available to students and public by the presence on campus of such headliners in the lively arts as pianist and writer William S. Newman and drama director Tom Gruenewald.

Stimulating talk came to the community in a series of free public lectures by visiting staff members like the eminent British classicist H. D. F. Kitto and Pulitzer prizewinner Russel B. Nye.

The latest scientific developments were aired in weekly seminars featuring topflight scientists.

All in all, the 10-week session, directed by Dean Robert W. Coonrod, is rated one of the best in MSU history by veteran observers of the summer campus scene.
